AchemAsia 2007

On behalf of the host, CIEC Group Corporation, it gives me great pleasure to welcome you all here to Beijing and to AchemAsia 2007.

AchemAsia has been successfully held at our fairground for about two decades, and now it has become the most influential trade show for the chemical and bio-chemical industry in China. Over the years, as the show develops, we can feel the growing demand for larger exhibition space and better facilities and service.

Now I have some good news that you may be interested in: CIEC Group Co. has started building a new venue near the Beijing International airport, and the first phase of construction will be completed by the end of 2007. The first phase consists of 8 modern exhibition halls with a total indoor exhibition space of 100,000 sqm, and it is also completed with conference centers, restaurants, visitor registration facilities etc. In the second phase of this project, there will be another 8 exhibition halls (that is another 100,000 sqm indoor space, which will bring the total number to 200,000 sqm), as well as office building, hotels, restaurants and other commercial amenities. I'm pretty confident that the new centre will become the most integrated and modern fairground in Beijing.

We look forward to hosting the next AchemAsia show there in 2010.

And I also wish you all every success in AchemAsia 2007!
