HOW TO GET THERE

WILDBAD KREUTH

Nestled in the idyllic landscape between Lake Tegernsee and the Achen Pass, the former spa looks back on 500 years of history. For three hundred years, the „Sankt Leonhard“ spa was the property of the Abbots of Tegernsee until secularisation; in 1803, it was sold to a farmer from Kreuth. Only 15 years later, King Max Joseph I of Bavaria (1756-1825) purchased the entire complex and extended it to its present size. The current owner from the Wittelsbach family, Duke Max in Bavaria, closed the sanatorium and the pump house in 1973 and leased the building to the Hanns Seidel Foundation. On September 25, 1975, Wildbad Kreuth opened as an educational center.

INVITATION / COMMITTEE

We would like to invite you to an engaging scientific meeting at a magical location. Wildbad Kreuth, a political education centre close to Lake Tegernsee in the Bavarian Alps, set in one of the most beautiful landscapes of Germany, will host the "European Workshop on High-Throughput Developments and Applications" from 26th to 29th of February 2012.

This European Workshop brings together scientific users and technical developers in the area of high-throughput technology to network and discuss the latest developments and challenges.

The conference programme provides a balanced mix through the various application areas of high-throughput technology in materials science, highlighting the most promising directions of research and applications, while offering plenty of time for in-depth discussions.

The isolated location and the limited number of participants guarantee an environment of relaxed and confidential exchange beyond the usual reserve. There will be plenty of time to foster contacts and numerous opportunities for networking with the major players in the field.
